Supporting Members of the Canadian Armed Forces (CAF)

Our Government's new defence policy Strong, Secure, Engaged is an ambitious yet realistic plan that outlines Canada's defence priorities for the next 20 years. We want to ensure that the Canadian Armed Forces (CAF) is well-funded, well-equipped and fully supported.

Our plan focuses first and foremost on the heart of the Canadian Armed Forces – the brave women and men who wear the uniform.

We have an obligation to support our Canadian Armed Forces members from the moment they join. Under Strong, Secure, Engaged, a new CAF Transition Group will ensure that no member leaves the Forces until all the benefits and services they require are in place.

Our plan commits to a range of new investments for the Canadian Armed Forces, its members, and their families. It will deliver the resources and capabilities needed for a strong and agile military.

Canada cannot meet its defence needs without the dedicated, motivated and highly skilled people who work tirelessly to defend Canada and promote Canadian values and interests at home and abroad.

Our government understands this, and that ensuring a smooth and effective transition is critical to the well-being of CAF members.

Under Strong, Secure, Engaged, the new CAF Transition Group will support all members as they seamlessly transition to post-military life.

Through this new Group, CAF members will receive the professional and personalized support they need.

In recognition of the sacrifices made by serving members and their families, all troops deployed on international operations will be exempt from federal income tax on their CAF salary up to the pay level of Lieutenant-Colonel, effective January 1, 2017.

This is in addition to existing allowances that compensate for hardship and risk.
